BEEF

Beef is the flesh of the adult animal of the genus Bos, and is usually derived from the hindquarters of the animal. It is a rich source of protein and is one of the most important sources of food for man. The quality of the beef is determined by the breed of the animal, the age at which it is slaughtered, and the manner in which it is handled and stored.

Beef is a staple food in many parts of the world, and is particularly popular in the United States. It is a source of many essential nutrients, including iron, zinc, and B vitamins.
