

AN BILLE IASCAIGH MHARA AGUS DLÍNSE MHUIRÍ 2005 SEA-FISHERIES AND MARITIME JURISDICTION BILL 2005

EXPLANATORY AND FINANCIAL MEMORANDUM

Introduction

The main provisions of the Bill are—

- to revise with amendments PART XIII of the Fisheries (Consolidation) Act 1959 (No. 14) (as amended to date — see Appendix 4) so as to clarify and strengthen the law against illegal sea-fishing and safeguard the implementation of National Fisheries Policy or EC Common Fisheries Policy, notably, by remedying defects in sections 223A and 224B of the 1959 Act (sections 15 and 14), by making it an offence to contravene certain EC Regulations which are directly applicable (section 11), streamlining arrangements for allocating and managing the State's sea-fishing quotas and entitlements (sections 12 and 13), and by updating penalties for a wide range of sea-fisheries offences (section 28), and making new statutory provisions for forfeiture of proceeds from illegally-caught fish (section 32) and appointment of an independent statutory Seafood Control Manager in the Department of Communications, Marine and Natural Resources for improved enforcement of sea-fisheries law and food safety law in relation to fish and fishery products (section 41);
- to provide for the transfer from the Attorney General to the Director of Public Prosecutions of responsibility for the prosecution of sea-fisheries offences (section 40) and for the prosecution of offences under the Dumping at Sea Act 1996 (No. 14) (as amended) (section 70);
- to update and replace the Maritime Jurisdiction Act 1959 (No. 22) (as amended) and give effect to *Part V — Exclusive Economic Zone of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea 1982 [Part 3 and Schedule 2];
- to safeguard Exchequer revenues, by ensuring due payment of taxes by applicants for sea-fishing boat licences (section 65) and of charges in respect of any vessel availing of services at any of the 5 State-owned Fishery Harbour Centres (Howth, Dunmore East, Castletownbere, Ros a' Mhíl and Killybegs) (section 69);
- to clarify the scope of Ministerial policy directives to the Sea-fishing Boat Licensing Authority or to the Appeals Officers, by including a specific reference to measures to control and regulate the capacity, etc., of the sea-fishing fleet and the rational management of fisheries (section 66);

*Published in the Irish Treaty Series as No. 1 of 1998.

—to update the law relating to the registration of sea-fishing boats and miscellaneous offences involving sea-fishing boats (sections 42 to 48);

—to clarify and modify aquaculture licensing law, by copper-fastening the longstanding arrangement whereby the Minister for Communications, Marine and Natural Resources could renew an aquaculture licence, even one that had already expired, relaxing the automatic ending of a licence if the Minister is satisfied that a 2-year delay in starting, or a 2-year cesser of, aquaculture operations arose for bona fide reasons (e.g. fish health, environmental conditions, etc) and permitting a reduction in licensed area or production, or the use of novel or experimental equipment in licensed areas, under certain conditions (section 68); and —to repeal obsolete, spent or superseded provisions of 14 Fisheries Acts and of 5 other Acts listed in Schedule 1 to the Bill, in the interests of regulatory reform (section 4 and Schedule 1).

The Bill comprises 4 Parts (71 sections) and two Schedules.

The Supreme Court on 16 July 2003 (Vincent Browne Case) impugned a purported Ministerial Order under section 223A of the Fisheries (Consolidation) Act 1959 (No. 14) to penalise any breach of the EU prohibition on the use of drift nets (with provision for conviction on indictment) within the area of application of the Common Fisheries Policy (CFP), which includes but extends beyond the 200 nautical-miles exclusive fishery limits of the State. The prohibition should have been the subject of Ministerial Regulations under the European Communities Act 1972 (No. 27) which only provides for summary offences. The alternative of Ministerial Regulations under section 224B of the 1959 Act (with provision for conviction on indictment) was not availed of because that section as it stands only applies to within the 200 nautical-miles exclusive fishery limits of the State. Accordingly section 224B has to be amended to extend its geographical scope and to apply to all activities in breach of the Common Fisheries Policy, and not merely illegal fishing or attempting to fish illegally (e.g. not keeping proper records or proper equipment on board, etc.). Section 14 of the Bill does so and will provide the basis for giving effect to detailed CFP requirements going forward.

The Supreme Court on 31 May 2005 (Tom Kennedy Case) impugned a purported further Ministerial Order, relating to detailed discretionary national measures to give effect to the CFP, for lack of cover by way of primary legislation. Section 15 of the Bill fills that gap, in line with section 14, as regards such measures.

Provisions of Bill

PART 1—PRELIMINARY AND GENERAL (SECTIONS 1 TO 5)

Section 1 is a standard feature. It gives the short title of the Bill when enacted, for ease of referencing, and provides for the collective referencing and interpretation of relevant provisions of the Bill with the existing Fisheries Acts 1959 to 2003 or the existing Fishery Harbour Centres Acts 1968 to 2005 or certain other Acts, as appropriate. It also provides three further new collective citations for ease of reference, namely—

- Sea-Fisheries Acts [comprising relevant sea-fisheries provisions of the Bill and the Fisheries (Amendment) Act 2003 (No. 21)],
- Aquaculture Acts [comprising the Fisheries (Amendment) Act 1997 (No. 23) as amended, including section 68 of the Bill, relevant provisions of the Fisheries and Foreshore (Amendment) Act 1998 (No. 54) and the Fisheries (Amendment) Act 2001 (No. 40)] and
- Dumping at Sea Acts [comprising the Dumping at Sea Act 1996 (No. 14), the Dumping at Sea (Amendment) Act 2004 (No. 35), and section 70 of the Bill], for the purposes of their restatement or consolidation into one Act each.

Section 2 is a standard technical feature which defines certain Acts referred to in the Bill as well as explaining references to provisions of the Bill, so as to avoid unnecessary verbiage in the rest of the Bill.

Section 3 is a standard statutory provision relating to Ministerial Regulations under Part 2 or section 44 (registration of sea-fishing boats) of the Bill, or under section 25 of the Fisheries (Amendment) Act 2003 (No. 21) in relation to conservation and management of straddling and highly migratory fish stocks. Either House of the Oireachtas may, if it sees fit, resolve to annul the Regulations within 21 sitting days after the Regulations are laid before it, but without prejudice to the validity of anything done under the Regulations before that annulment.

PART 2 — SEA-FISHERIES (SECTIONS 6 TO 41)

Chapter 1 — Sections 6 and 7

Section 6 is a technical provision which defines references to certain Acts and Regulations and terms and expressions used in Part 2 of the Bill, so as to avoid unnecessary verbiage.

Section 7 simply updates and restates provisions of section 30 of the Fisheries (Amendment) Act 1962 (No. 31) so as to ensure that sea-fisheries law as updated by this Bill applies to the Merville Area (as defined by the Foyle Fisheries Act 1952 (No. 5)) and to confirm, for avoidance of doubt, that this Bill also applies to the Lough Area (i.e. that part of Carlingford Lough within the State) as defined by section 31 of the British-Irish Agreement Act 1999 (No. 1).

Chapter 2 — Sections 8 to 15

Section 8 updates and replaces section 221 of the 1959 Act restricting the entry of foreign sea-fishing boats in the exclusive fishery limits of the State (as defined by section 55 of the Bill).

Section 9 updates and replaces section 222 of the 1959 Act providing for the regulation of foreign sea-fishing boats while inside the exclusive fishery limits of the State and for them to exit from those limits.

Section 10 updates and replaces section 222A of the 1959 Act (as inserted by section 7 of the Fisheries (Amendment) Act 1978 (No. 18)) which makes it an offence to fish without lawful authority on board a foreign sea-fishing boat within the exclusive fishery limits of the State. Section 28 of the Bill prescribes the penalties for such offences.

Section 11 makes it an offence (subject to the penalties in section 28 of the Bill) to contravene certain EC Regulations relating to the Common Fisheries Policy which are directly applicable.

Section 12 greatly simplifies and expedites arrangements for allocating and managing the State's annual sea-fishing quotas as decided by the EU Council.

Section 13 sets out clear provisions for the grant of authorisations for limited fishing for certain specified stocks of fish which are under pressure.

Section 14 updates and replaces section 224B of the Fisheries (Consolidation) Act 1959 for the purpose of applying, by Ministerial Regulations, detailed requirements of the Common Fisheries Policy of the European Communities in relation to matters for which the State has no discretion as regards principles or policy, both beyond as well as within the exclusive 200 nautical-miles exclusive fishery limits of the State. Section 224B at present (see text in Appendix 1) only applies to within the exclusive fishery limits of the State and to illegal fishing or attempts to fish illegally, and requires to be amended as proposed in light of the Supreme Court Judgments of 16 July 2003 in the Vincent Browne sea-fisheries case (Updated penalties for offences under the section are being provided for in section 28 of the Bill).

Section 15 updates and replaces section 223A (see text in Appendix 2) of the 1959 Act to empower the Minister for Communications, Marine and Natural Resources by Regulations to supplement the Common Fisheries Policy of the European Communities by prescribing national regulatory measures (Updated penalties for offences under the section are being provided for in section 28 of the Bill.)

Chapter 3 — Sections 16 to 26

Section 16 updates and replaces section 220 of the 1959 Act providing for the appointment of sea-fisheries protection officers (including continuance of appointment of sea-fisheries protection officers serving at the time the Bill is enacted).

Section 17 updates and replaces section 231 of the 1959 Act and sets out the detailed powers of sea-fisheries protection officers. Those powers are supplemented by section 18 of the Bill in relation to sea-fishing boats.

Section 18 updates and replaces section 233 of the 1959 Act setting out powers of sea-fisheries protection officers relating to sea-fishing boats.

Sections 19 to 21 update and replace sections 233A, 234 and 235 of the 1959 Act dealing with the detention of sea-fishing boats alleged to have been involved in sea-fisheries offences, pending charge or prosecution or determination of Court proceedings for the offence.

Section 22 updates and replaces section 236 of the 1959 Act making detailed provisions for the recovery of fines and forfeitures imposed by the Courts for sea-fisheries offences.

Section 23 makes it clear that an alleged offender against sea-fisheries law can be brought before the District Court Judge assigned to the District Court presiding over the area in which the port where the alleged offender was detained is located. Thus, for convenience and ease of reference, the section re-enacts provisions of section 309 of the 1959 Act.

Section 24 updates and replaces provisions of section 15 of the Fisheries (Amendment) Act 1994 (No. 23) which outlaws and penalises obstruction, etc, of sea-fisheries protection officers.

Section 25 updates and replaces provisions of section 15 of the Fisheries (Amendment) Act 1994 (No. 23) which outlaws and penalises assault on sea-fisheries protection officers.

Section 26 provides on standard lines, for law enforcement officers, immunity from legal action for bona fide reasonable actions of sea-fisheries protection officers under this Part of the Bill.

Chapter 4 — Sections 27 to 40

Section 27 is designed to overcome procedural problems for prosecution of indictable fisheries offences caused by the general abolition of provision for preliminary examination in the Criminal Procedure Act 1967 (No. 12) by the Criminal Justice Act 1999 (No. 10) (effective from 1 October 2001 pursuant to Criminal Justice Act, 1999 (Part 3) (Commencement) Order, 2001 (S.I. No. 193 of 2001)). That abolition, in effect, requires the Book of Evidence to be served in the District Court within 48 hours of the arrest of the alleged offender and requires the presence of that person in the State.

Section 27 is designed to restore the pre-2001 position by entitling the accused person (with the consent of the Prosecutor) to opt to plead “Not Guilty” and have the case sent forward for due course trial in the Circuit Court without unnecessary District Court proceedings.

Section 28 updates and comprehensively restates penalty provisions for indictable sea-fisheries offences (which may be dealt with summarily by the District Court if minor and the Prosecutor agrees), which were originally enacted in the Fisheries (Amendment) Act 1978 (No. 18) and subsequently amended. Consequential repeals are provided for in section 4 of, and in Schedule 1 to, the Bill. In addition to any fine and forfeiture (if any) which it may impose on conviction for such an offence, the Court may suspend or revoke the sea-fishing boat licence for the boat concerned (new power).

Section 29 updates and replaces section 14 of the Fisheries (Amendment) Act 1994 (No. 23) which provides for the forfeiture of boats used in the commission of certain sea-fisheries offences. Repeal of section 14 is provided for in section 4 of, and in Schedule 1 to, the Bill.

Section 30 is a technical provision to make it clear that it is not necessary for the Court to formally pronounce a record of forfeitures which arise as a statutory consequence of conviction by the Court of a person for any of the offences in question. Thus, for convenience and ease of reference, the section re-enacts provisions of section 316 of the 1959 Act.

Section 31 ensures that the Exchequer will benefit from the sale or other disposal of anything forfeited under section 28 or 29 of the Bill.

Section 32 aims to deprive owners of sea-fishing boats (if not the licence holders) which fish illegally of the economic benefit of so doing, as distinct from separately imposing a fine or other forfeitures, in relation to the offence of illegal fishing. It comprises six subsections:

Subsection (1) provides that where on the balance of probability it is shown that sea-fish were caught in contravention of any law of the State or of an institution of the EC, or in contravention of any international agreement to which the State is a party, the appropriate market value (as distinct from the proceeds) referable to disposal of illegally-caught fish shall be forfeited to the State and may be recovered from the owner of the boat or the holder of the sea-fishing boat licence for the sea-fishing boat concerned.

Subsection (2) provides that forfeiture under subsection (1) shall be in addition to (and not in substitution for) any fine or other forfeiture which a court may impose in relation to the sea-fishing boat or sea-fishing concerned and be for the benefit of the Exchequer (paragraph (a)) and may be imposed even where there were no proceedings for an offence in relation to the sea-fishing or boat concerned (paragraph (b)).

Subsection (3) provides that a sea-fisheries protection officer may adduce prima facie evidence that fish were caught illegally from the logbook, vessel tracking system or other record or documents concerned.

Subsection (4) provides that, in order to establish a valuation of the proceeds to be forfeited, the Court shall have regard to the greater of the following two amounts—

- (i) the amount of the proceeds of disposal according to any documentary evidence submitted by the owner of the sea-fishing boat concerned, or
- (ii) the appropriate market value of the sea-fish concerned involving a willing seller and a willing buyer operating at arms' length.

Where the sea-fish were first disposed of for storage but subsequently were disposed of otherwise at a different value, the appropriate market value shall be taken to be the disposal with the greater value.

Subsection (5) provides that any proceedings pursuant to section 32 may be brought by or at the suit of the Seafood Control Manager appointed under section 41 of the Bill.

Subsection (6) defines “disposal” and “sea-fishing boat concerned” for the purposes of the section.

Section 33 provides for appeal to the Circuit Court against dismissal of proceedings by the District Court for any offence under the Sea-Fisheries Acts 1959 to 2005. The Circuit Court can confirm or reverse that dismissal. No further appeal is to be permitted in the matter. Thus, for convenience and ease of reference, the section re-enacts provisions of section 310 of the 1959 Act.

Section 34 updates and restates section 48 of the Fisheries Act 1980 (No. 1) which provides proof of whether a sea-fishing boat is foreign or not.

Section 35 provides on standard lines for offences by bodies corporate and unincorporated and persons purporting to act on their behalf.

Section 36 restates with amendments section 19 of the Fisheries (Amendment) Act 1978 (No. 18) to provide for the service of trial documents to defendants who are non-resident in the State. Repeal of section 19 is provided for in section 4 of, and in Schedule 1 to, the Bill.

Section 37 makes specific provision for the master, owner, charterer or hirer of a sea-fishing boat used in illegal operations to avoid conviction for the offence if they can prove that there was no consent, connivance, wilful default or lack of due diligence on their part in relation to those operations.

Section 38 makes it clear that the Court can presume by reference to certain evidence, information, etc. (and in the absence of proof to the contrary), that a sea-fishing boat was used in illegal sea-fishing or other sea-fisheries operations.

Section 39 enables the Minister for Communications, Marine and Natural Resources to take summary proceedings for minor offences under the Sea-Fisheries Acts 1959 to 2005, namely, offences which are not covered by section 28 of the Bill if it is decided to do so rather than involve the Attorney General (or, after an Order is made under section 40 of the Bill, the Director of Public Prosecutions).

Section 40 provides that the Attorney General will continue to a conclusion any Court proceedings taken by him in relation to indictable sea-fisheries offences which have not been completed when the prosecution function is transferred to the Director of Public Prosecutions by Order made by the Government under this section. That Order should be laid before both Houses of the Oireachtas as soon as possible after it is made.

Chapter 5 — Section 41

Section 41 is designed to improve enforcement of sea-fisheries law by the appointment of an independent statutory Seafood Control Manager (and also Deputy Seafood Control Manager) in the Department of Communications, Marine and Natural Resources:

Subsection (1) specifically provides for the appointment of a senior officer of the Department as independent statutory Seafood Control Manager (and also Deputy Seafood Control Manager) with sea-fisheries law enforcement and related functions as set out in the remainder of the section. The appointment is for the Secretary General to make (or revoke, under subsection (2)), in line with the Public Service Management Act 1997 (No. 27).

Subsection (3) is a standard provision to highlight the independence of the Seafood Control Manager in the performance of his or her functions subject to the rest of the section which imposes specific obligations to be met by him or her.

Subsection (4) highlights specific sea-fisheries and other law enforcement and related functions to be carried out as effectively and efficiently as possible in deploying resources provided to him or her for the purpose.

Subsection (5) requires the Seafood Control Manager to advise the Office of the Attorney General (or the Director of Public Prosecutions, after the Government Order is made under section 40) promptly of any contravention of sea-fisheries law detected by him or her or by the team, to promote compliance with the law in question and give policy advice to the Minister and Secretary General of the Department of Communications, Marine and Natural Resources.

Subsections (6) and (7) impose specific standard reporting obligations on the Seafood Control Manager, via Annual Reports to the Secretary General and Minister for presentation to Dáil and Seanad Éireann, and such reports as may be required by the Secretary General on the performance of the functions of the Seafood Control Manager.

Subsection (8) provides, on standard lines for law enforcement officers, immunity from legal action for actions of the Seafood Control Manager and of the personnel deployed by him or her, for any bona fide failure to perform any enforcement function mentioned in the section.

Subsection (9) defines certain terms and expressions used in the section.

Chapter 6 — Sections 42 to 48

Sections 42 to 48 deal with the registration of sea-fishing boats and replace in updated terms, to provide specifically for any applicable EC or other international obligations, and in convenient accessible format, sections 373 and 374 of the Merchant Shipping Act 1894 as amended by section 4 of the Fisheries (Amendment) Act 1994 (No. 23), and section 8 of the Fisheries (Amendment) Act 1983 (No. 27).

Section 42 provides for the continuance of the national Register of Fishing Boats, to be maintained and updated by the Registrar General of Fishing Boats (or the Deputy Registrar General), confirmed in office or newly appointed under this section, and for the appointment of local registrars for certain ports.

Section 43 requires the registration, lettering and numbering of sea-fishing boats, in accordance with regulations under section 44 of the Bill or EC or other international obligations. A breach of those requirements is an offence subject to a fine not exceeding €5,000 on summary conviction (subsection (6)).

Subsection (2) specifically provides for the Registrar General to enter Irish sea-fishing boats in the Register of Fishing Boats or to remove them from that Register, so as to manage properly the capacity of the Irish sea-fishing fleet in accordance with EC or other obligations.

Subsection (3) maintains the requirement, imposed by section 8 of the Fisheries (Amendment) Act 1983, for a sea-fishing boat licence to be in place as a prerequisite for the registration of the sea-fishing boat concerned in the Register of Fishing Boats or as a ship under the Mercantile Marine Act 1955 (No. 29).

Subsection (4) provides for the issue of a certificate of registration for each sea-fishing boat entered in the Register of Fishing Boats and ensures that certificate (or a certificate signed by the Registrar General that a sea-fishing boat is or is not entered in the Register of Fishing Boats) is sufficient evidence in any Court proceedings.

Subsection (5) ensures that boat ownership details entered in the Register of Fishing Boats are evidence (unless otherwise proven) for the purposes of Court proceedings but do not affect the rights or obligations of the actual owners.

Subsections (7) and (8) ensure that the non-registration of a sea-fishing boat which should be registered does not affect any obligations, etc., attaching to that boat.

Section 44 provides for the making of Regulations by the Minister for Communications, Marine and Natural Resources for the registration, lettering and numbering of sea-fishing boats. Specific new provision is made for giving effect to EC or other international obligations and for the charging of fees on registration of sea-fishing boats or their removal for the Register of Fishing Boats. The current Regulations — Merchant Shipping (Registry, Lettering and Numbering of Fishing Boats) Regulations 2005 (S.I. No. 261 of 2005) — if in force on the enactment of the Bill continue in force as if made under this section and may be amended or revoked or replaced, accordingly. The Public Offices Fees Act 1879 will not apply to such fees.

Section 45 ensures that the Exchequer benefits from any fees charged under Regulations made under section 44 of the Bill for the registration or de-registration of sea-fishing boats.

Section 46 continues in force, as if made under section 44 of the Bill, the Merchant Shipping (Registry, Lettering and Numbering of Fishing Boats) Regulations 2005 (S.I. No. 261 of 2005) if those Regulations are in force on the enactment of the Bill.

Section 47 updates and replaces provisions of section 224 of the 1959 Act (as amended by section 3 of the Fisheries (Amendment) Act 1978 (No. 18)) relating to official documents to be on board foreign sea-fishing boats within the exclusive fishery limits of the State, and the lights, etc., to be carried on all sea-fishing boats within those limits so as to prevent collisions.

Section 48 defines a number of terms used in the preceding sections of this Chapter, so as to avoid unnecessary verbiage.

PART 3 — MARITIME JURISDICTION (INCLUDING EXCLUSIVE ECONOMIC ZONE AND EXCLUSIVE FISHERY LIMITS) OF STATE (SECTIONS 49 TO 61)

Part 3 updates and replaces the Maritime Jurisdiction Act 1959 (No. 22) as amended by the Maritime Jurisdiction (Amendment) Acts 1964 (No. 32) and 1988 (No. 9) and gives effect to Part V — Exclusive Economic Zone of United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea 1982 (which entered into force in respect of the State on 28 July 1996).

Section 49 is a technical provision which defines certain terms used in Part 3 of the Bill, so as to avoid unnecessary verbiage.

Section 50 defines the territorial seas of the State as heretofore (restating section 2 of the 1959 Act).

Section 51 sets the outer limit of the territorial seas of the State (i.e. 12 nautical miles from the baseline), restating section 3 of the 1959 Act as last amended by section 2 of the 1988 Act.

Section 52 defines the baseline from which the territorial seas and internal waters of the State are to be reckoned and empowers the Government to prescribe straight baselines (restating section 4 of the 1959 Act).

Section 53 defines the internal waters of the State (restating section 5 of the 1959 Act).

Section 54 (with Schedule 2 to the Bill) is a new provision to give effect to Part V — Exclusive Economic Zone of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea 1982, so as to define the exclusive economic zone of the State (essentially extending outwards 200 nautical miles from baselines, except where an equitable equidistant limit has to be between the State and mainland U.K.).

Section 55 (which replaces section 6 of the 1959 Act as amended) is corollary to section 54, by providing that the exclusive fishery limits of the State are coterminous with the exclusive economic zone of the State. The exclusive fishery limits of the State are currently specified in the Maritime Jurisdiction (Exclusive Fishery Limits) Order 1976 (S.I. No. 320 of 1976) made under section 6 of the 1959 Act (as amended by section 2 of the 1964 Act) with effect from 1 January 1977, pursuant to a European Council decision that all EEC Member States with Atlantic and North Sea Coasts should declare 200 nautical miles exclusive fishery zones.

Section 56 simply restates section 10 of the 1959 Act, to define jurisdiction of Courts in relation to offences committed within the territorial seas or internal waters of the State.

Section 57 updates (in consequence of Part 2 of the Bill) section 11 of the 1959 Act, to provide for prosecution of non-nationals for offences on non-Irish ships in the territorial seas of the State, if the Minister for Foreign Affairs consents. Prosecutions for sea-fisheries offences are not subject to such restrictions and will not be under the Bill when enacted.

Section 58 is a technical provision to make it clear that Part 3 of the Bill does affect the jurisdiction of the State under EC or other international law, restating section 12 of the 1959 Act.

Section 59 is a technical provision for evidential purposes, restating section 13 of the 1959 Act.

Section 60 restates section 14 of the 1959 Act for the purposes of clarifying certain references in legislation and to consequentially amend certain Acts in light of the provisions of this Part of the Bill and the repeal of the Maritime Jurisdiction Acts by section 4 of, and Schedule 1 to, the Bill.

Section 61 is a standard provision to require the laying of Government Orders under Part 3 before Dáil and Seanad Éireann, restating provisions of the 1959 Act.

PART 4 — AMENDMENTS TO FISHERIES ACTS 1959 TO 2003, FISHERY HARBOUR CENTRES ACT 1968, DUMPING AT SEA ACT 1996 AND MARITIME SAFETY ACT 2005 (SECTIONS 62 TO 71)

Chapter 1 — Sections 62 and 63

Section 62 is simply a technical drafting restatement of section 309(1) of the 1959 Act, relating to District Court proceedings, so as to take account of this Bill (particularly section 28 which relates to certain indictable sea-fisheries offences, the proceedings in relation to which can only be taken in the Circuit Court (unless it is agreed that the offence is of a minor nature which may be tried summarily in the District Court)).

Section 63 simply makes it clear that prosecutions for summary offences — under the Fisheries Acts apart from those relating to sea-fisheries which are specified in the Tables to section 28 of the Bill — may be taken by the Minister for Communications, Marine and Natural Resources (if it is decided to do so rather than involve the Attorney General (or the Director of Public Prosecutions, from the date of the Government Order under section 40 of the Bill)).

Chapter 2 — Sections 64 to 66

Section 64 restates section 4 (sea-fishing boat licensing) of the Fisheries (Amendment) Act 2003 (No. 21) with amendments made by section 53 of the Maritime Safety Act 2005 (No. 11), for ease of reference and administration.

Section 65 imposes tax clearance requirements for the grant of a sea-fishing boat licence, from such date as the Minister specifies by Order under the section. The grant of a sea-fishing boat licence is of significant economic benefit to the grantee, allowing access to a valuable public resource, and should be matched by confirmation — via a tax clearance certificate — that the grantee's tax affairs are in order.

Section 66 amends the Fisheries (Amendment) Act 2003 (No. 21) governing sea-fishing boat licensing, as follows:

Paragraphs (a), (b)(ii), (iii) and (iv), (f) and (k) reflect the replacement of section 4 of the Act by section 64 of the Bill.

Paragraphs (b)(i) and (d) clarify the scope of Ministerial policy directives to the Sea-fishing Boat Licensing Authority or the Appeals Officers to include a specific reference to measures to control and regulate the capacity, etc., of the sea-fishing fleet and the rational management of fisheries.

Paragraph (b)(v) provides an indemnity, on standard lines, for the Sea-fishing Boat Licensing Authority in relation to licensing or registration of sea-fishing boats.

Paragraph (b)(vi) reflects section 42 of the Bill providing for the Register of Fishing Boats.

Paragraph (c) is consequential to sections 15 and 14, respectively, of the Bill providing for the updating and replacing of sections 223A and 224B of the Principal Act (Fisheries (Consolidation) Act 1959 (No. 14)), so as to allow for charging of fees for applications for and grant of licences, authorisations or permits under Ministerial Regulations under those sections; it also removes doubt that a fee could be imposed in respect of sea-fishing boat licences granted by an Appeals Officer. The Public Offices Fees Act 1879 will not apply to such fees.

Paragraph (e) is designed to copperfasten in law the one-month time scale allowed for third parties to make representations on licence applications: if they do not avail of this, they cannot appeal under the Fisheries (Amendment) Act 2003 (No. 21) against the decision on that application.

Paragraphs (g), (h) and (i) are consequential to section 28 of the Bill which comprehensively provides for penalties for sea-fisheries offences.

Paragraph (j) ensures that the Public Offices Fees Act 1879 will not apply to fees chargeable under section 32 of the 2003 Act in relation to foreshore application and other fees.

Chapter 3 — Section 67

Section 67 amends the Mercantile Marine Act 1955 (No. 29) as follows:

Paragraph (a) inserts a new section 16A to restate, for convenience of reference, the provisions of section 3 of the Fisheries (Amendment) Act 1994 (No. 23) as to the persons who are qualified to own an Irish registered sea-fishing ship.

Paragraph (b) amends section 18 to exempt from compulsory registration as a ship under that Act a sea-fishing boat of less than 15 metres in length overall which is registered in the Register of Fishing Boats maintained under section 42 of the Bill (or exempt from such registration by Regulations under section 44 of the Bill).

Paragraph (c), for convenience of reference, restates as a specific amendment to section 19 (new subsection 2(A)) the amendment made by section 9 of the Fisheries (Amendment) Act 1983 (No. 27) regarding rights of nationals, etc., of reciprocating States to own an Irish registered ship or a share in it. This restatement allows for the repeal of the 1983 Act in full by section 4 of, and Schedule 1 to, the Bill.

Section 68 amends the Fisheries (Amendment) Act 1997 (No. 23) governing aquaculture licensing, as follows:

Paragraph (a) updates per diem penalties for continuing offences of unlicensed aquaculture after conviction by the Court.

Paragraph (b) amends section 19 of the 1997 Act to make it clear that the power to renew a licence includes the power to renew a licence that has already expired. It also provides that any expired licence that has been renewed is valid subject to standard Constitutional safeguards, modelled on section 3(5) of the Fisheries and Foreshore (Amendment) Act 1998 (No. 54), section 3(3) of the Minerals Development Act 1995 (No. 15) and section 60 of the Maritime Safety Act 2005 (No. 11).

Paragraph (c) simply restates (for the purpose of consolidating the Acts relating to aquaculture) of section 10(4) of the 1997 Act as inserted by the European Communities (Environmental Impact Assessment) (Amendment) Regulations 1999 (S.I. No. 93 of 1999).

Paragraph (d) provides for the removal from office or other appropriate action (in lieu of prosecution for an offence) against a member of the Aquaculture Licences Appeals Board or a person employed or engaged by it for acting despite having a conflict of interests or for non-disclosure of full interests.

Paragraph (e) updates to €600 the fine for refusal to attend or give evidence at an oral hearing of an appeal or to wilfully alter, etc., any document needed therefor.

Paragraph (f) updates fines and abolishes terms of imprisonment as additional or alternative penalty, and also amends section 65 of the 1997 Act so that the period for taking summary prosecutions is extended to 12 months rather than 6 months, after the date of the offence in the case of unlicensed aquaculture or breach of a licence.

Paragraph (g) makes standard provision for offences by bodies corporate and unincorporated and persons purported to act on their behalf (new section 65A being inserted in 1997 Act) and provides (parallel with section 34 of the Bill for sea-fisheries offences) for appeal to the Circuit Court against dismissal of proceedings in the District Court (new section 65B being inserted in 1997 Act).

Paragraph (h) enables the Minister at the request of the licensee to reduce the licensed area or aquaculture licensed or both, or to permit use of novel or experimental equipment inside the licensed area, without requiring the grant of a new licence or amending the licence (which would needlessly involve public consultation and possible appeal and excessive costs for operators).

Paragraph (i) is a consequential repeal to take account of paragraph (j).

Paragraph (j) amends and restates section 69 of the 1997 Act which provides that an aquaculture licence ceases to have effect if the permitted aquaculture does not start up within two years of the grant of the licence and that the Minister shall revoke a licence where aquaculture has ceased for a continuous period of two years. It is proposed to modify these provisions, with effect from 30 June 1998 when the 1997 Act's provisions came into force, by inserting a further provision that the cesser/revocation requirements shall not apply where the Minister is satisfied that there were bona fide reasons (e.g. fish health, environmental conditions, etc.) why the licensed operation did not start up or ceased, as the case may be.

Chapter 5 — Section 69

Section 69 amends section 4 of the Fishery Harbour Centres Act 1968 (No. 18) to ensure that no vessel (including the capacity thereof) in respect of which there are arrears of Fishery Harbour Centre rates or charges due can be disposed of without the consent of the Minister for Communications, Marine and Natural Resources, and that the Minister's power to dispose of such a vessel covers the capacity thereof. The specific reference to "capacity" is intended to avoid being left with the mere hull of the vessel concerned, which may be of little value of itself. The opportunity is being taken to delete subsection (8) of section 4 of the 1968 Act because the same Minister now has responsibility also in relation to commercial shipping and so could not consult himself or herself before making a by-law or order under the section.

Chapter 6 — Section 70

Section 70 amends the Dumping at Sea Act 1996 (No. 14) to take account of Part 3 of the Bill which updates and replaces the Maritime Jurisdiction Act 1959 as amended (paragraph (a)), to update references to members of the Permanent Defence Forces acting as authorised officers under that Act (paragraph (b)), and to allow the Director of Public Prosecutions to prosecute offences under that Act (paragraphs (c) and (d)).

Chapter 7 — Section 71

Section 71 amends the Maritime Safety Act 2005 (No. 11) to take account of Part 3 of the Bill which updates and replaces the Maritime Jurisdiction Act 1959 as amended (paragraph (a)), correct typographical errors (paragraphs (b) and (c)) and to make it clear that the prohibition on unlawfully interfering with access to or from ports and harbours in the State and the power to direct vessels to move in the interests of safety of life at sea, etc., apply also to vessels which are not registered in the State but are transiting Irish waters (paragraph (d)).

Exchequer and Financial Implications

The proposed clarification and strengthening of the Fisheries Acts 1959 to 2003 against illegal fishing should deter offenders and safeguard fisheries, and lead to more cost-effective, if not less, enforcement activity which is funded by the Exchequer. The Bill should also secure taxes and fees payable by sea-fishing boat licensees, as well as timely payment of rates and charges in respect of any vessel availing of services at any Fishery Harbour Centre.

The Bill also clarifies and improves aquaculture and sea-fishing boat licensing law for the benefit of the sectors concerned.

The Attorney General already has this power under the 1996 Act.

Part 3 of the Bill gives effect to Part V — Exclusive Economic Zone of the United Nations Convention of the Sea 1982 and updates and replaces the Maritime Jurisdiction Act 1959 (as amended), in the interests of regulatory reform.

It is not expected that the transfer from the Attorney General to the Director of Public Prosecutions of the function of prosecuting sea-fisheries offences and offences under the Dumping at Sea Act 1996 will give rise to additional Exchequer expenditure of any significance overall or additional staffing.
