35. “That Seanad Éireann;

noting;

- that the continued provision of public rural transport links is essential to the social and economic health of rural life;
- the withdrawal of these services will plunge homes all over Ireland into isolation, loneliness and expense;
- that huge fear and worry has been provoked by the threatened withdrawal of rural transport links, particularly the pilot evening rural transport scheme which is a crucial service for many elderly people living in isolation;
- and considering;
- the CSO indicates that 50% of rural families experience difficulty in accessing public transport;
- an estimated 21% of rural families experience great difficulty in accessing basic services such as shops, post offices and GPs due to a lack of public transport;
- nationwide bus routes are currently under review and it is likely that a large number of services on routes in rural areas will be withdrawn;

- the proposal in the McCarthy Report to cease funding for the Rural Transport Programme;
- the comparatively low cost of the Rural Transport Programme in the wider context of transport expenditure;

calls on the Government to:

- introduce a national transport regulator responsible for opening up transport networks to new competition and to facilitate better targeted subsidies that protect transport options in rural areas at least cost;
- pending the introduction of a transport regulator, do everything possible to ensure existing rural transport services are maintained; and

- reject attempts to damage the social fabric of rural Ireland.”
