4. "That Seanad Éireann

notes that:

- the Social, Personal and Health Education (SPHE) Programme, incorporating Relationships and Sexuality Education (RSE) has been a mandatory part of the curriculum in all primary and junior cycle post-primary schools since 2003;
- all schools are obliged to have an agreed school policy and a suitable RSE programme in place for senior cycle students;
- a recent Forum in Áras an Uachtaráin on Working Together to Promote Positive Mental Health, attended by representatives of the relevant stakeholders including young people, highlighted the need for schools to play their part in this crucial aspect of growing into adulthood;
- this Forum pointed to the centrality of the RSE programme for promoting positive mental health in our young people and that the effective implementation of such a programme in all schools was critical to the development of active, fully rounded and responsible citizens;
- forum participants pointed out that in some schools the senior cycle was dominated by the examination system which often had a distorting effect on the priority afforded to the social, personal and health development of the pupils, thereby contributing to a poor and inconsistent delivery of the RSE programme;
- the quality and inconsistency of the implementation of the SPHE programme in some of our schools and, in particular, the narrow focus of the RSE programme being experienced by many senior cycle pupils has given rise to concern;

and calls on:

- the Minister for Education and Skills to give serious and sustained attention to redress this imbalance and to ensure that our education system responds to all of the developmental needs of each individual pupil.”.
