- notes that the student profile of those studying medicine and law in our universities continues to be dominated by those from more affluent socio-economic backgrounds;
- further notes that there are perceived and actual barriers to the medical and legal professions for those from less affluent socio-economic backgrounds;
- calls for an examination of the barriers to entry into the medical and legal professions to be undertaken by the Department for Further and Higher Education, Research, Innovation and Science, in conjunction with the Higher Education Authority and the relevant professional bodies, and that a report outlining suggested methods to ensure greater opportunities for access be presented before Seanad Éireann within six months.”

2. “That Seanad Éireann:

recognises that:

- post offices serve a vital social and economic role in their communities;
- there is a very specific commitment in the Programme for Government to protect the postal network;
- rural and small urban post offices, which are mostly run by independent postmasters, have had their income and footfall greatly reduced;
- many small post offices are now operating on the equivalent of the national minimum wage;
- Grant Thornton has predicted that 885 post offices will cease to exist by July 2021; and
- if footfall and incomes are not improved then the post office network will be decimated; and calls on the Government to:

- act on its commitment as outlined in the Programme for Government;
- implement an action plan for the post office network within three months;
- implement a new community banking service operated by An Post to be made available in all post offices throughout the country; this post community bank could be based on either the New Zealand Kiwibank model or the German Sparkassen model, both of which have been found to be valid models;

- consider a once-off capital investment fund for the further modernisation of the post office network to enable the widespread provision of banking services in rural and disadvantaged urban areas, most of which have been completely abandoned by the current banking model;
 - ensure that the provision of all over-the-counter services relating to Government Departments must be tendered for on the basis of both social and economic grounds, to include rural Ireland in any future growth;
 - ensure that all business previously identified by Grant Thornton, the former Oireachtas Joint Committee on Transport and Communications and the Post Office Network Business Development Group must be implemented;
 - establish a working group to identify the potential for local post offices to act as hubs to facilitate other services such as health, transport, agriculture, etc., and to act as a one-stop-shop for Government services as committed to in the Programme for Government;
 - strongly consider committing funds, while the above measures are being implemented, to ensure no more downward pay reviews to post offices which will make them uneconomical and have the effect of closure by a thousand cuts;
 - ensure that a five-year holding plan will be put in place while these changes are being implemented or there will be no network left to salvage; and
 - recommends that An Post be invited before the Joint Committee on Transport and Communications Networks to outline their plan for the future of the post office network.”

4. “That Seanad Éireann:

acknowledges that:

- floods are an inevitable part of life in Ireland but the frequency and intensity of flooding has greatly changed both now and into the future, as Met Éireann can confirm, because the type and intensity of our rain and our weather has changed and our flood management needs to adapt also;
- floods are usually caused by a combination of events including:
 - heavy rains;
 - overflowing rivers;
 - broken dams;
 - coastal storms and storm surges;
 - a lack of vegetation;
 - blocked or overloaded drainage ditches;
 - infrastructure that was built on flood plains;
- numerous severe floods have occurred throughout the country in the last decade;
- floods present a risk when people, property, the environment and our cultural heritage can be potentially damaged, land eroded, nutrients leached from soils and soils washed away;
- through the appropriate measures in the right places, we can reduce their likelihood and limit their impacts;
- natural flood management is an approach to managing soil, wetlands, woodlands and floodplains along a river to retain and slow water at times of flood risk, reducing the speed and the peak of floodwaters;
- international best practice in flood risk management recommends:
 - a river basin whole catchment area approach;
 - not passing flood risk management problems in one region on to another;
 - insofar as is possible, we must engage in natural processes to help and guide us as we move forward to solve flooding challenges;
 - mitigation, non-structural and soft engineering measures should be considered and deployed where appropriate recognising their environmental value;
 - structural measures, such as defence structures are important when it comes to the protection of human health and safety, and valuable assets;
 - while structural measures such as hard engineering provide important and viable protection to many at risk communities, the design of flood risk solutions needs to both consider and, as appropriate, integrate non-structural and soft engineering measures as both more efficient and sustainable mitigation measures. Nature conservation and landscape management considerations need to be taken into account;

endorses Ireland's whole of Government approach to flood risk management which is co-ordinated by the Office of Public Works (OPW) across three strategic and policy areas:

- prevention: e.g. avoiding construction in flood-prone areas;
- protection: e.g. taking feasible measures, both structural and non-structural, to reduce the likelihood and impact of floods;
- preparedness: e.g. informing the public about dealing with flood risk and a flood and building community resilience;

recommends, due to the significance of the task we are facing, exacerbated by climate change, that the Government:

- maintains a multi-annual investment programme managed between the OPW and the local authorities in flood relief measures to protect communities;
- requests the OPW and local authorities to engage with experts such as hydrologists in the fields of flooding and coastal erosion for solutions to flood risk management;
- undertakes a national land use review, including farmland, forests and peatlands, so that optimal land use options inform all relevant Government decisions. The review will balance environmental, social and economic considerations and involve a process of evaluation of the ecological characteristics of the land. It will include consideration of emissions to air and water, carbon sequestration and climate adaptation challenges. Policy co-benefits, such as rewetting or forest regrowth to mitigate flooding risks in river catchments, will be considered. The national land use review is currently under way, at first phase, by the Department of Environment, Climate and Communications together with the Department of Agriculture, Food and the Marine;
- promotes planting of ‘protection forests’ along rivers and lakes to protect water quality and assist in managing flood risks;
- progresses the development of a national policy on coastal erosion and flooding that takes account of damages present and predicted due to climate change;
- launches a new revised and strengthened River Basin Management Plan in 2022, drawing on a collaborative approach between all stakeholders, which is currently open for public consultation.”
